Customer Reviews

Be aware that this is not a 1:1 full size replica. It's close. I would say it's approximately 2/3 size and noticeably smaller than the real one. Can't beat it for the price. PROS- Looks, colors and textures like the original. Moire pattern disk, although stationary, gives the illusion of movement when you view it from different angles. The three LED gems (blue, red, blue) light up when buttons are pressed. Two buttons-two sounds. The button on left sounds the original chirping sound while the button on the right sounds a combination of static and radar-like beacon. The texture of the black plastic is bumpy like the original. And finally the price can't be beat when compared with other alternatives. CONS- NOT 1:1 - It's slightly smaller than the original at about 2/3 the size. All Plastic. The brass colored flip cover does not "flip" - you must physically open it with your other hand or use your finger on the hinge. Does not chirp when opened like the original - The left button does the chirp. It's also very light because of all plastic construction. Given its shortcomings I still rated it 4 stars because it's a decent replica and you can't beat the price when compared to others. It comes with a tiny 3"x2.5" booklet with full color photos from TOS and some useful information. Both communicator and booklet come in a full-color 3.5"x3"x1 7/8" box.

Great detail for small replica but seems not to far off for size....

My son and I are dressing up as Kirk and Spock for Halloween. We're fans of Star Trek, but not total purists. From reading some reviews, these aren't the most ideal size, but they fit in your hand, and look darn close to what you see on the old series. What I'm saying is this - if you're a hardcore cosplay type, this may not be your thing. If you want to dress up like a classic Star Trek character, and want something that looks real enough and doesn't cost a fortune, grab this up. You'll be glad.

A terrific prop to add to my Halloween costume. It's palm size makes it so easy to keep it out of sight until you want to show off how complete your costume is. Fun stuff.

Very cute gift for a Star Trek fan (and from a Star Trek fan). This toy only makes two sounds, but it's seriously a great price and value. I'm glad I didn't invest in the more expensive version with more features, because the gift recipient was quite happy with this!

Ã Â Based on how much I liked the mini enterprise and the phaser I decided to give this mini communicator a shot and WOW I am soooo happy with this purchase. This is 3ÃfÂ©4 scale I believe but is still a good sized toy. You cannot flip the cover open like you can on the Diamond Select version ($40 ish) but for $12 what can you expect. There are 3 lights up (see pics below and video) and 2 buttons that make sounds when you push it (see video). Overall I am really happy with this. If you don't want to shell out $40+ for the diamond select version give this one a shot. The details, lights, sounds for $12 is a great value. It also comes with a mini booklet and nice box that holds everything together. Overall I am super happy with this and easily recommend it to others. Notes: Worth The Money: Yes! Would I Recommend It: Yes! (bought on .ca)

My son is a huge Star Trek fan so I got this for his Easter basket. He loves it. It's smaller than the other communicator (the gray one), and doesn't have voices speaking, but he loves it nonetheless. I thought the price was right as well.

It does make a similar sound like on the show & it appears to be sturdy enough for the kids costume for Halloween, but real small.
