Customer Reviews

For many years, in advance of planning a regional trip, we find a Karen Brown book and settle back knowing that whatever she recommends will be first-rate. If we knew where to find her, we'd buy her a dinner and a fine bottle of Champagne. Kudos to Karen Brown.

Although this small book was written a few years ago many of the places to stay are still there and functioning. The drives and itineraries are still especially relevant. There are 5 maps in the beginning that explain the routes. They explore New York, the Hudson River Valley, New Jersey, Philadelphia, The Brandywine Valley, Lancaster and Gettysburg, DC, Virginia and West Virginia, Western Maryland and the Delmarva. There is just enough detail to guide you with pacing and some information of historic importance. Suggested Inns are given. This is not the high speed tourist pace, but one of leisure and old fashioned comfort in bread and breakfast or nice non-chain hotels. There is a good key to give you information such as; children welcome, fireplaces in some rooms and a detailed index. This is a book that will give you the slow travel and some ideas of interesting places to visit.
